

REPORT OF THE GLOBALEX MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE FOR JULY 2019

The Globalex management committee met virtually on 31 July 2019. Attending were Ilan Kernerman, Simon Krek, Julia Miller, Dion Nkomo, and Lars Trap-Jensen. This Report constitutes a summary of the discussion.*

The Globalex website was hacked and is down temporarily.

Lexicon has now been published online, with all issues from 1994 to 2018; all articles available as separate files. A point of access from the Globalex website will be added. Two Nordic journals will become accessible through the Globalex site, as mentioned in last month's report.

At the successful Afrilex conference in Windhoek, Dion made a presentation about Globalex, relying on an adaptation of previously presented material. The PowerPoint presentation about Globalex and a recent video-recording will be mounted on the Globalex site and the continental associations invited to provide links to them.

Proposals for future Globalex workshops were discussed. The Afrilex choice for a workshop is on the topic of pedagogical lexicography and dictionaries in the education system. Euralex will also be looking into holding a Globalex workshop in 2020. Julia is preparing a Globalex presentation for Australex in September. As it is too short notice for a workshop at LT4All, a presentation of Globalex could suffice, along with a proposal to the organizers to co-organize a workshop on lesser-resourced languages.

An application for the planned LREC workshop is being prepared by Ilan, Simon, John McCrae, and Jorge Gracia on the topic of linked lexicography, both monolingual and bilingual.

Simon has joined the board of the UNESCO conference "Language Technologies for All" (Paris, December 5-6). We may make suggestions for content, and suggested ideas included a Globalex presentation, a workshop or a panel with participants from Africa (Dion), Australia (Julia), and possibly South America. All are urged to check the website** and return with ideas.

*The management committee keeps minutes of its meetings; this summary serves to inform the Continental Associations, which are urged to share the Report with their members.
